REPORT OF BOARD OF HEALTH.

The report of the Board will be very brief, the result of preventable diseases having been very satisfactory during the year, with only one exception, that of a slight epidemic of typhoid fever at North Newport, there being four or five cases, the Board not being able to locate the source of contagion. The Board very much regrets that the vote of the town, in regard to the testing of cows, could not be carried out, the reason being that the appropriation was not sufficient. We wish to urge that this is a matter of much importance in the prevention of tuberculosis.

Faithfully submitted,

BOSTON, MASS., Feb. 28th, 1908.

To The Board of Water Commissioners,

NEWPORT, N. H.,

GENTLEMEN:—

At your request I visited your town September last, inspecting the reservoir, visiting Gilman's Pond and inspecting the pipe line to the same, the gate chamber, etc.

The principal object of my visit and the problem for solution was how to get more water from Gilman's Pond into the reservoir, the present 6 inch pipe line not delivering a sufficient amount to fill the reservoir even at night when the use in town is the least.

To arrive at a correct understanding of the situation and to suggest a remedy, it was necessary to determine how much water was being delivered to the town direct and through the reservoir. In order to measure the flow, a point was selected where the 6 inch line to the reservoir and the 6 inch line leading to the town separate. On the main line above this junction there is a hydrant from which to take water and also a house connection.

By attaching a pressure gage to the faucet in the house it was determined what pressure there was under ordinary conditions with the pipe line delivering to the reservoir and also to the town. A small dam was constructed beside the road and a weir placed therein. After shutting the gate on the pipe line leading direct to the town and the one leading to the reservoir, by opening the hydrant until the gage stood at the same pressure as before the gates were shut, the water was conducted through a line of hose to the improvised reservoir and over the weir.

In this way an accurate measurement was secured of the amount of water flowing from Gilman's Pond. Sufficient time was given for the ground to become thoroughly saturated so there should be no loss from percolation and several measurements were taken and it is believed they are quite correct.

This shows a flow of somewhat less than 300,000 gallons, but taking into account the service pipes and the amount flowing into watering troughs along the line above this point, it is believed that 300,000 gallons is the amount being delivered from Gilman's Pond in twenty-four hours. This is about 75 per cent of what the pipe was estimated to deliver when first laid, and the question arises what is the cause of this decrease in flow.

First of all it is very doubtful if the pipe line would have delivered as much as was estimated, as experiments upon pipe lines are usually made through perfectly clean, straight lines, consequently free from changes of direction, horizontally or vertically. The line to Gilman's Pond has eight or nine summits upon which air valves are located. It is possible that sometimes air may accumulate at these summits to a certain extent; there may be some possible obstructions in the pipe and there probably is some slight deterioration in the interior surface.

At the time of the test I do not think there was much trouble from air, neither do I think that the results indicate that there is any material obstruction in the pipe, but that the decreased flow is due to the above mentioned causes.

Upon consulting the maps and plans I find that the pressure of 120½ lbs. at the house service pipe corresponds with what the difference in elevation would lead us to expect. It was slightly more than would be due to the level of the reservoir and would be due to friction in the pipe from the gage to the reservoir. By increasing the flow until the gage showed 64 lbs., a decrease of 56 lbs. from normal pressure, it was increased at the rate of 125,000 gallons in twenty-four hours. This would be in about the same general ratio as would be expected from the calculations.

Whatever may be the cause of the diminished flow from the original calculations, it is quite evident that practically there can be no remedy, and my opinion is that the flow at the present time is as near the calculated amount as a pipe line of that character laid the same length of time would be expected to show. The daily use shows that it is only with the strictest economy that any supply can be kept in the reservoir and in case of fire or any unusual draft the reservoir will become emptied.

The full supply from Gilman's Pond to the town is only equivalent to two very ordinary fire streams so that without the reservoir for supply it would not be capable of handling a conflagration of any size.

Now that the extension has been made to Guild, which I understand has been done, it is absolutely essential that an additional supply should be delivered to the reservoir and the only solution of that problem is an additional pipe line.

In considering a new pipe line there are very few of the summits that can be avoided. One quite pronounced summit at about one-half a mile from the pond can be eliminated and I should strongly urge that it be done when the new line is laid.

In the consideration of a new pipe line it is a satisfaction to know that material at the present time is very much lower than it has been for several years. How long this low price will continue is uncertain and I should strongly urge that immediate action be taken. In fact it seems to me absolutely necessary that it should be taken at once to secure advantage of low prices and also to safeguard the interests of the town.

It is very evident that an additional 6 inch pipe line from Gilman's Pond to the separation of the line leading to the reservoir and the town will at least double the supply.

An 8 inch pipe will supply a little more than twice as much as a 6 inch and practically after years of use the difference is still greater as the inequalities in pipe laying due to changes of alignment and eventually the deterioration from sediment or rust do not affect the flow to so great a percentage as in the smaller size.

At the present prices of material I estimate the cost of a 6 inch line to be thirteen thousand eight hundred and sixty dollars ($13,860.00) or seventy cents ($.70) per foot for all material and labor.

An 8 inch pipe would cost about twenty cents ($.20) a foot more, or seventeen thousand eight hundred and twenty dollars ($17,820.00) so that for an additional expenditure of about $4,000.00 the capacity would be more than doubled and it seems to me would be ample for years to come. It is a great additional safeguard to the town, and the larger the works the more imperative it becomes to have two pipe lines for supply, and as one must be laid I advise the construction of an 8 inch pipe line the entire length from Gilman's Pond to a junction of the two 6 inch lines near the town, as it seems to me the additional amount expended will be worth much more than the added interest on the outlay during the period when it might not be absolutely necessary.

An additional 6 inch line might supply the town for many years, but as has been seen in your own case the development of water works is very apt to outrun calculations in the extension and use, and almost assuredly the income keeps pace with or in advance of the outlay for construction.

I therefore recommend the construction of an 8 inch pipe line believing this additional cost and added interest charge are more than offset by the added security to the business interests of the town.

SCHOOL REPORT

To the Honorable School Board of the Town of Newport.

Gentlemen:—

A comparison of the attendance table for this year with the two previous years will show a diminution in the number of tardinesses and an increase in the percentage of attendance. No epidemic of sickness has been prevalent and the care of the teachers in regard to the occasional absences has been responsible for this better showing.

On account of the large number of pupils in the grades, the primary building is now occupied by six grades, one in each room, which necessitated the finding of some place for the kindergarten. Arrangements were finally made for them in the building leased to the Y. M. C. A., and while at no time during the year has the registered attendance been so large, yet the percentage of attendance has been better than the year before. In the village schools, below the high school, we are occupying ten rooms, with one grade in each room. This affords the opportunity to divide the pupils into divisions where those of about the same proficiency may recite together. By this means the slower pupils are not neglected by having the quicker ones do most of the work, nor are the quicker ones retarded by waiting for those who master a subject less easily. A further and greater advantage is in the flexibility of this arrangement. A child may be better in reading than in arithmetic; he will, therefore, be in the advanced division in reading and in the other in arithmetic. By this means more individual attention can be given to that particular scholar and the safe method of adapting the personality of a teacher to the personality of any given child may be used. In other words we begin to see the result of our prediction that each class as it passes from grade to grade is better equipped than before and that original and individual thinking is being done.

To obtain this result in the highest degree requires efficient teachers in each grade—and the retention of those teachers, whenever possible, during this efficiency. The changes in teachers since the last report has been more than we could wish, but, perhaps, not more than we might expect. In the high school, Miss Annie A. Busiel is now the teacher of modern languages and Mr. Ernest M. Lovell instructor in sciences and mathematics in place of Mr. Wiley, who recently accepted a position in Laconia. In justice to him, it should be said, that he was perfectly willing to remain throughout the year, but having previously declined better positions, when the loss of his services here would have been a serious inconvenience, we could not feel it otherwise than fair to grant him his release to accept a position which offered better opportunities for advancement. Miss Jennie H. Malmberg and Miss Julia E. Todd are respectively in the fifth and second grades, where last year were Miss Grace Graves and Miss Virginia Belknap, and Mrs. Arthur S. Rowell in the third grade. In the district schools but one change was made, Lillian M. Farwell assuming successfully the charge of the schools at North Newport, made necessary by the resignation of Miss McKellips. Some adjustments of the course of study must be made from time to time, but this can never be a question of more than secondary importance. The thing of all-pervading importance is completeness and exactness of performance. Teachers and pupils should bear in mind that the business of schools is formation; but years of discipline ought to result in two things: (1) ability to do certain things better than the average citizen of any community can do them, and (2), therefore, the liking for tasks and interest in doing them. In personal development there is no substitute for work. We speak of brainy statesmen, ministers, financiers. No one who has brains will doubt that brains count, but a truer way to classify such men would be upon the basis of industry. Of course, our greatest statesmen, our wisest and most influential churchmen, and our successful business men are men of brains, but in their particular fields of activity we can hardly find their equals in energy, in the amount of work they do. Many a man, unheard of, has started with as good brain capital as any of these, but has failed to realize upon himself through lack of hard work. There is no substitute for it. The success of many men with limited advantages in school is due more than anything else to habits of systematic work at something that is worth while. When a child has been allowed to go through a school course without work, his attainments are not what they should be. This fact should not be overlooked, but the important fact is that the habit of not working has been confirmed, and the school turns out a loafer and not a worker; it turns out one whose tendencies are in other directions than towards productive, independent citizenship. With the courses of study systematized as they now are, with the opportunity for each teacher to do his best, we feel that this result by means of good teaching should be approximately reached; namely, an earnest desire on the part of each pupil to accomplish the task imposed and an enthusiastic and helpful attitude on the part of each teacher to bring about this result.
